In the Field of Sport

WATER SEASON CLOSING WITH HUDSON CLASSIC

Yale-Harvard Race and Inter-Collegiate Regatta Only Events on Schedule.

New York, June 8.—Only the two big classics of the year—the Yale-Harvard race at New London and the intercollegiate regatta at Poughkeepsie—remain on the rowing schedule.

Yale and Harvard with all their traditions and color behind them will have their usual place in the spotlight on June 23, but national interest centers more in the battle of six crews on the Hudson on June 26.

Navy's Olympic, national and intercollegiate champion eight, Syracuse, Cornell, Columbia, Penn and the University of Washington will make up the field that will row for the intercollegiate title at Poughkeepsie. As in the case last year, when California and Cornell engaged in such a sensational duel, the interest probably will be confined to the fight for second place.

Cornell has in her varsity shell the same eight that rowed as freshmen and sophomores for the late "Pop" Courtney and it is being heralded as a worthy descendant from the days not so long back, when Cornell was the undisputed mistress of the water.

Washington must be figured because of the victory over California in the race for the Pacific Coast championship this spring. Syracuse likewise is being regarded as a possible dark horse.

Since 1914, Yale has been following the English style of rowing even to the point of wearing suits like the British. The style never has been successful, not that it lacks merit, but because American youngsters are not trained to bear the strain it imposes upon the stomach muscles.

Just about this time last year, Guy Nickalls, British coach, was relieved at Yale. James Cordery, young Englishman succeeded Nickalls and in the short space of one month he whipped the crew into such shape that it accomplished the impossible and beat Harvard.

Just recently, Cordery was relieved of his duties and his brother, George, was substituted as coach. Not only was this switch made but the stroke was changed from the English style back to what has been termed as a mixture of the Belgian and American methods.

George Tragos, Olympic, middleweight champion, through his manager and trainer, Peter James, has accepted a challenge issued by Gus Eisel, a St. Louis wrestler. Tragos, while weighing about 170 pounds now, will make the 165-pound weight required by Eisel.

The match will be definitely arranged as soon as the St. Louis wrestler puts up $1,000 as a forfeit.

Several other matches are being arranged for Olympic champion, and Columbians may have a chance to see him in a real match.

Sportsman's Park here during the "Papa Club" field day festivities, the baseball ruler looked around for a "regular player's cap."

Rogers Hornsby stepped forward and tendered his.

"Gee, Judge, you wear a hot bonnet for this time of the year," Rog remarked. "Why not wear a straw instead of the fedora?"

"Well, I would if someone would give me one," Landis laughed.

"I've got a couple coming for home run hits. I'll get you one."

A boy was dispatched with an order, and the straw hat soon topped Landis' broad grin.
